

Four Seasons

Winter is a frozen shroud
Covering the landscape
Epitomised by ice and snow
While most wild things lie dormant

Spring is the morning of the year
When the buds start sprouting leaves
Woodlands carpeted like a vivid rainbow sea
Dawning of new life begins

The warming of the summer sun
Bright with gentle breeze
The bees are having a busy time working hard indeed
Farmers work until sundown tending to the vital yield

Autumn season is the setting of the sun
The year's twilight act is just beginning
The squirrels gather their acorns and the antlers of the red stags lock, the cold winds rise and the cycle begins anew.

Four Seasons

Reaside Clinic (Secure Mental Health Unit)
Lorraine Holden Memorial Platinum Award for Poem
18K1711